Contemporary Religion and Popular Culture (CRPC) invites renewed engagement between religious studies and media studies, anthropology, literary studies, art history, musicology, philosophy, and all manner of high-level systems that undergird the everyday and commercial. Specifically, as a series, CRPC looks to upset the traditional approach to such topics by delivering top-grade scholarly material in smaller, more focused, and more digestible chunks, aiming to be the wide-access niche for scholars to further pursue specific avenues of their study that might not be supported elsewhere.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

To the students, faculty, and staff of the Mythological Studies program at Pacifica Graduate Institute, for continually inspiring and supporting a passion for this work. Your collegiality and friendship over the past several – challenging – years is wholeheartedly appreciated. To the volume contributors, several of whom are former students, I extend my sincere thanks for your time, patience, and for the privilege of learning from each of you. To Jeff Kripal, for your generosity and intellectual inspiration over many years. To the anonymous reviewers of the initial book proposal – your helpful feedback improved this project in significant ways. To Phil Getz at Palgrave and Eliana Rangel at Springer, with gratitude for your support throughout the proposal and production stages. To Joanna, for encouraging this project, and for seeing it – and me – through, as you so generously do, with patience, love, humor, and playfulness. And lastly, to my brother Joey, for whom this volume is dedicated, and the weekly rides in our mother’s blue Mercury Sable station wagon (thanks mom for driving) in search of comics – and more.

He serves as the Creative Director for the Joseph Campbell Foundation and holds a PhD in Mythological Studies with Emphasis in Depth Psychology from Pacifica Graduate Institute. He teaches film, writing, and story courses in the Los Angeles area and around the world. Follow his work at: tellingabetterstory.com.

Craig Chalquist, PhD, is department chair of Consciousness and Transformative Studies at National University. He teaches and writes where psyche, story, nature, and myth intersect. His most recent book is Terrapsychological Inquiry: Restorying Our Relationship with Nature, Place, and Planet (Routledge, 2020). Visit his website at: worldrede.com.

Yvonne Chireau, PhD, is the Peggy Chan Professor of Black Studies at Swarthmore College, where she teaches courses on Africana religions and American religious history. She is the author of Black Magic: Religion and the African American Conjuring Tradition (2003) and the co-editor of Black Zion: African American Religions and Judaism (1999). Her writings on the historical intersections of magic, religion, and cultural discourses on Voodoo can be found online at the research blog The Academic Hoodoo: academichoodoo.com.

Erik Davis, PhD, is an author, award-winning journalist, and scholar based in San Francisco. His wide-ranging work focuses on the intersection of alternative religion, media, and the popular imagination. He is the author, most recently, of High Weirdness: Drugs, Esoterica, and Visionary Experience in the Seventies, co-published by MIT Press and Strange Attractor. He also wrote Nomad Codes: Adventures in Modern Esoterica (2010), The Visionary State: A Journey through California's Spiritual Landscape (2006), a critical volume on Led Zeppelin (2005), and the celebrated cult classic TechGnosis: Myth, Magic, and Mysticism in the Age of Information (1998). Erik's scholarly and popular essays on music, technoculture, drugs, and spirituality have appeared in scores of books, magazines, and journals, and his writing has been translated into a dozen languages. He received his BA from Yale University, and earned his PhD in religious studies at Rice University. www.techgnosis.com.

Jennifer Maile Kaku, PhDc, received a BA in English from Stanford University and an MA in Mythological Studies from Pacifica Graduate Institute, where she is a doctoral candidate. She holds a French postgraduate degree (DEA, Diplôme d'études approfondies) in Histoire et Sémiologie du Texte et de l'Image from the Université de Paris-Diderot. In addition to Hawaiian and Indigenous myth, her research interests include the mythological underpinnings of everyday life, the power(s) of story and narrative, and a focus on issues of gender, ethnocentricity, and alterity. Several of her essays have been published in the Mythological Studies Journal. She is also a dancer and a teacher of hula who divides her time between Paris, France, and Honolulu, Hawai'i.

Jeffrey T. Kiehl, PhD, is a Jungian Analyst and senior training analyst at the C.G. Jung Institute of Colorado and the Inter-Regional Society of Jungian Analysts. Jeffrey is the author of Facing Climate Change: An Integrated Path to the Future, which provides a Jungian perspective on the climate crisis. He is also the author of “Engaging the Green Man” in Depth Psychology and Climate Change, and “U.S. Cultural Complexes and Climate Change” in Cultural Complexes and the Soul of America. Jeffrey has been reading comic books since 1961.

Jeffrey J. Kripal, PhD, is the Associate Dean of the Faculty and Graduate Programs in the School of the Humanities and the J. Newton Rayzor Chair in Philosophy and Religious Thought at Rice University. He also helps direct the Center for Theory and Research at the Esalen Institute in Big Sur, California, and sits on advisory boards in the U.S. and Europe involving the nature of consciousness and the sciences. Jeff is the author of numerous books, including, most recently, The Superhumanities: Historical Precedents, Moral Objections, New Realities (Chicago, 2022), where he intuits an emerging new order of knowledge that can engage in robust moral criticism but also affirm the superhuman or nonhuman dimensions of our histories, cultures, and futures. He is presently working on a three-volume study of paranormal currents in the sciences, modern esoteric literature, and the hidden history of science fiction for the University of Chicago Press collectively entitled The Super Story: Science (Fiction) and Some Emergent Mythologies. His full body of work can be seen at <http://jeffrejkripal.com>. He thinks he may be Spider-Man.

Amy Slonaker, JD, PhD, is a doctoral candidate in the Mythological Studies program at Pacifica Graduate Institute. After receiving her undergraduate degree in Religious Studies from UC Santa Barbara, she attended Seattle University School of Law and subsequently practiced as an attorney for over 20 years in the areas of criminal defense and securities litigation. Since 2012, she has worked with the Morbid Anatomy Library of Brooklyn, New York, by contributing programming and serving on its board.

Evans Lansing Smith, PhD, has degrees from Williams College, Antioch International, and The Claremont Graduate School, and is Core Faculty in the Mythological Studies program at Pacifica Graduate Institute. He is the author of ten books and numerous articles on comparative literature and mythology, and has taught at colleges in Switzerland, Maryland, Texas, and California, and at the C.G. Jung Institute in Kusnacht. In the late 1970s, he traveled with Joseph Campbell on study tours of Northern France, Egypt, and Kenya, with a focus on the Arthurian Romances of the Middle Ages and the Mythologies of the Ancient World.

Li Sumpter, PhD, is a mythologist and multidisciplinary artist who applies strategies of worldbuilding and mythic design toward building better, more resilient communities of the future. Li's creative research and collaborative projects engage the art of survival and sustainability through diverse ecologies and immersive stories of change. Li is a cultural producer and eco-arts activist working through MythMedia Studios, the Escape Artist Initiative, and various arts and community-based organizations in Philadelphia, PA, and across the country. She holds an MA in Art and Humanities Education from NYU and an MA/PhD in Mythological Studies with an emphasis in Depth Psychology from Pacifica Graduate Institute.

John Todd, PhD, is a diplomate Jungian analyst based in Evergreen, Colorado. A native of Florida, he began his career as a children and families counselor for Hospice of the Florida Suncoast for over a decade before starting private practice. In 2006 he relocated to Evergreen with his wife and two children. He is currently the Director of Training for the C.G. Jung Institute of Colorado.
